You can have fun without bursting firecrackers: Jaya

Popular Bengali actress Jaya Ahsan has called for sensitivity in the celebration of the Thirty-First Night by bursting firecrackers with loud noises. In the past, there have been reports of various accidents surrounding the celebration of the end of the English year. Many birds have died due to the sound of firecrackers, dogs and cats have been seen running around in panic. There have even been reports of children dying. This year, the actress has called for celebrating the Thirty-First without bursting firecrackers.

Jaya Ahsan's new movie 'Nakshi Kanthar Zamin' was released in Bangladesh last Friday. The release of this movie about the Liberation War in the month of victory has particularly moved Jaya's fans. Many people went to the theaters to watch the movie on the opening day. Regarding the movie, the actress told Jago News, 'Several viewers have expressed their love for the movie. However, I am waiting to know what the general audience says after watching the movie. Because many common people participated in the Liberation War. It is important to know how the movie looks to the common people.'
